ROBERT S. BYERS

Prominent Franklin Township Farmer Dies Suddenly.

Robert S. Byers, 63 years old, a prominent farmer of Franklin township died suddenly yesterday afternoon about 1:10 o'clock at his home near Dawson of heart trouble, superinduced by the intense heat. Mr. Byers ate a hearty dinner and apparently was in his usual health. Hearing a commotion at his chicken house he went out to investigate the matter and was stricken near the gate of his home. He had been a sufferer of heart trouble for the past year or more. After falling to the street, Mr. Byers attempted to get up and had partially succeeded when he fell back unconscious. Physicians were summoned, but Mr. Byers died without regaining consciousness. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence, with Rev. J. B. Reas, pastor of the Laurel Hill Presbyterian Church officiating. Interment in Laurel Hill cemetery.

Mr. Byers was born on the farm where he died February 19, 1851, a son of John W. and Jane Woods Skyles Byers. He was reared on the farm and obtained a good education. He was twice married. January 28, 1871, he married Miss Ella Cooper, a daughter of Joel and Eliza Cooper. To the union two children were born, Isaac L. and Joel F. Byers. His first wife died in 1873 and in 1882 he married Miss Caroline Gifford, daughter of Henry and Marie Emerson. Gifford. Eleven children were born, ten of whom survive as follows: John H., Thomas H., Nancy Jane, Olive E., Annie E., Franklin Grove, Alva, Margaret, Edna and Joseph. He is also survived by two brothers, Isaac Byers of Nebraska, and John W. Byers of Grand Ridge, Ill. He was a member of the county lodge No. 728, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was a Democrat and a U. S. office of school director and road supervisor.

Catron, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, officiated at the funeral of Mrs. Sarah M. Parkhill held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence on North sixth street, West Side. Appropriate music was rendered by the members of the Methodist Protestant Church choir. The services were attended by many friends and relatives of the deceased.

The pallbearers were Keil Long, C. M. Miller, G. A. Murkle, D. P. Patterson, T. H. Hazen, and John Robinson. Interment in Hill Grove cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Brown of Fayette City; Miss Cynthia Reed of Perryopolis, and Mrs. Charles McIntyre of Fairbairn were among the out of town persons attending.

SHIPS MAKE PANAMA

Balboa and Cristobal Have Already Become Ports of Call.

By Associated Press.

PANAMA, June 27.—The canal terminals at Balboa and Cristobal have now become regular ports of call for several steamship lines. Interruption of the Tehuantepec railroad route across Southern Mexico drove considerably shipping to these ports, but even now with the Tehuantepec service reestablished there are many boats which continue to call at Balboa or Cristobal for transfer of cargo across the isthmus.

The American-Hawaiian Steamship Company has gone back to the Mexican ports, but only until the canal is ready for regular use. The Elder A. Pyre Company, however, which has hitherto had only an occasional service between Liverpool and Cristobal, has now increased its service and is running regular steamships, and a Norwegian line of tramp steamers will regularly, while on the west coast the Salvadorian Railway Steamship Line Company has been diverted from Mexican ports to Balboa. It is understood also that steamer of a new Japanese line will begin service to Balboa soon.

BAN ON FILMS

Those Presenting Person of Jesus are Barred from Prussia.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 27.—Censor films presenting the person of Jesus are calculated to shock the sensibilities of religious people and may not be presented in Prussia, is the final decision of the Prussian supreme court, upholding the police prohibition of the pictures. The film story was taken from Kingsbeck's "Messiah." It is a pretentious example of cinematographic art.

The court, ruling against it, bases its decision on a former decision holding the Christian religion to be a part of the public order against whose disturbance the police are empowered to act. It considers the film in itself likely to offend, and declares a further possibility of offense is the fact that it might be presented in connection with comic scenes.

WEST VIRGINIA STILL SECOND AS COAL PRODUCING STATE

Output for 1913 Breaks All Records, Showing Total of 71,000,000 Tons.

With a production in 1913 exceeding for the first time in its history a total of 70,000,000 tons, West Virginia became firmly established as the second in rank among the coal-producing states. According to the United States Geological Survey, the production in 1913 was 71,308,932 tons, showing a gain of 4,622,295 short tons, or nearly 7 per cent, over the output of 1912 (66,786,637 short tons), up to that time the record tonnage. The increased production was accompanied by a considerably larger gain in value, which showed an increase over 1912 of $9,079,931, or 14.44 per cent. The value of the output in 1913 was $71,872,165. The average value per ton for the first time in 10 years exceeded $1. The production increased in 1913 in spite of the fact that the labor troubles in the Paint Creek and Cabin Creek districts of the Kanawha field, which began in the early part of 1913, were not settled until well into the spring of 1913, and that the unprecedented floods in the Ohio valley in the spring reduced shipments to the West for a considerable length of time. A few of the mines that were closed by the strike were not reopened during 1913, and the total production from the two districts affected was much below the normal output. The increased production was well distributed over the state, there being but three counties out of thirty where decreases were shown.

Of the total increase of over 4,500,000 tons, the increase in the quantity of coal made into coke in 1913 was only 15,545 tons, indicating that coke making in the state fell relatively behind. This does not mean, however, that less coke is being made from West Virginia coal. Large quantities of West Virginia coal are made into coke in ovens (principally of the retort type) located outside of the state, and in 1913 the coal shipped from West Virginia mines for coking at distant ovens was about twice as much as that used for the same purpose in the state.

Notwithstanding the increased production and increased prices in 1913, the year was not a satisfactory one to the operators, and the situation has been described as feverish. The labor difficulties were followed by an investigation by a committee from the Federal Senate, and when the State Legislature met in January nearly fifty bills (most of which the operators considered prejudicial to the industry) were introduced and some of them became laws. One of the bills, not in itself of the prejudicial class, was a workmen's compensation bill, enacted in February, which provided that 1 per cent of the pay rolls should be paid into the compensation fund, 50 per cent by the employers and 10 per cent by the employees.

During the year an amendment to the constitution of the state was adopted, which provides for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors after July 1, 1914. This is expected to result in the exodus of the miners, but the operators are hopeful of replacing the deserters with a better class of labor, and it is believed that the improved accident record of 1913 will be continued with even better results after the state-wide prohibition goes into effect.

According to the Bureau of Mines, the number of fatal accidents in the coal mines of West Virginia showed a decrease of 22, from 359 in 1912 to 327 in 1913, although there was an increase of nearly 10 per cent in the number of men employed. Labor troubles caused the loss of 377,405 working days, an average of 43 days for 5,300 men idle.

MUST TAKE ITS MEDICINE.

With all the unpopularity of the last room and a military aide in full uniform at his side, not to mention clenched fists and flashing eyes, President Wilson has announced to the country that he is determined to carry out the business men of the country what is the matter with business, and that he is determined to uphold his full course of treatment, which may or may not end with the anti-trust bills now under consideration. What the nation needs and must have is President Wilson's New Constitution of Freedom.

It is useless for business men to murmur or for Democratic interests to protest against such a policy. The President has actually convinced himself that a big boom is already under way and will soon arrive as the result of the inauguration of his policies, though where such a boom is coming from is a mystery to everybody else.
The country is reaping the reward of electing a perfectly honest but, highly theoretical president. When Woodrow Wilson's name was first proposed in this connection one of the objections urged against him was that he knew more about books than about business and consequently lacked in breadth and adaptability to meet the large problems of national life.
Business. This was generally admitted, but it was urged that he would have competent advisers.

He has had the advisers, but they were not very competent at best, and they lost because they hesitated. True to his pedantic instincts, the President assembled the Congress before him and made legislative demands.
The members submitted with meekness and alacrity. The result was natural. The President soon became a bigger man than his party.
The Democratic party is rushing on to its certain destruction. It is in much the same predicament as the farmer who yoked himself to the cart in the meantime, the country is condemned to suffer more or less from its mad caperings.

THE FIRMEN'S CONVENTION.

The Connelville convention of the Western Pennsylvania Volunteer Firemen's Association promises to be the biggest and most successful meeting ever held by this organization, and it will be largely due to the fact that the Connelville firemen have boosted the convention with unflagging zeal and enthusiasm. They have been just as active in putting on this convention as they have in their own work.
They deserve the moral and financial support of the citizens. Their entireties should be appreciated as a matter of local pride and public advancement. It must not be forgotten that this convention will be a large display advertisement for Connelville.

F. W. Wright has been elected superintendent of the Uniontown public schools. These Wrights seem to be coming right to the front as public administrators.

The court will probably have a serious talk with some of the road spikers.

A tireless automobile is a poor traveler.

After the supporters of the antitrust bills get through explaining what "unfair competition" means they might elucidate on the unfairness of the discriminations contained in the bill.

Ferryboats are cleaned up for fair.

The state fire marshal is helping the local fire marshals out of a great many embarrassments.

This is an earthquake era, political and otherwise.

City Sol. for Haines has taken some time to prepare the health ordinance.
C. H. Haines, but perhaps he has in mind the great mass of legislation which is passed in haste and reported at leisure.

It's back to Pike county for the Pin-bots.
Connelville promises to get a representative in the Federal Bank directors. Its candidates are 100% efficient in the matter of qualification.

The board of health is working largely on faith, but it announces the admirable of a little "house sense."
The combination ought to make a pretty fair first aid.

It has been said of officeholders that "few die and none resign," but this does not apply to the Showman family.

The variegated orthography of some of the modern Greek names indicates a cheerful purpose on the part of the press and the courts to lend all the charm possible to the descendants of those who lived with the gods.

President Wilson predicts that his patient, the business world, will revive after the operation. Probably, but when will he recover?

Villa has turned from butchery to humanity. He is getting ready to run for the presidency on the Reform ticket.

Some of the water meters installed by the water company are running up pretty big bills, especially the one installed in an empty apartment house and allowed to leak water all over the premises.

The West Virginia liquor law is no
respecter of country clubs.

BH Flinn's state officers are holding up the good roads movement in Pennsylvania. There's nothing Progressive about that.

The weather man seems to be getting up steam for the Glorious Fourth.

A little muddy water will not hurt the swimming hole in the eyes of the boys.

The man who has his clothes lined with stabbing and cutting knives is not a harmless creature. At the very least his psychological influence is bad.

Connelville has no laws or ordinances prescribing masculine sartorial art, nor has the line ever been drawn at the feminine creations which sometimes dazzle the eyes of modest men.

SCOTTDALE

Special to The Courier.
SCOTTDALE, June 27.—The Young Men's Christian Association lecture course has been arranged for the season of 1914-1915. Secretary J. A. Addison having signed up with the bureau. The Colt Lyceum Bureau will put on the entertainments again this year, having won out with the committee out of four bureaus in the field for the business. The Colt Bureau has given the courses the last couple of years. Their bookings for Scottsdale this year include The Oxford Company, Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Methodist Episcopal Church, The Metropolitan Grand Quartet, Senator Robert M. La Follette, The Neapolitans, Glenn Frank of the Northwestern University for a Sunday afternoon address. Following past custom if there are a sufficient number of course tickets sold, Albert Edward Whelan will give one of his addresses on Herodotus or Eugene O'Neill. The Oxford Company and the Neapolitans have appeared on the course here in the past.

FOR SALE.
 For Sale—Exceptionally well located lots on paved street, water and gas on monthly payments to suit purchaser. E. F. Dwyer, 23 Chestnut street, Scottsdale, Pa.—A.

BUILDINGS.
 The new garage of Albert Keller is being hurried along on Stoner and Merchant streets, the concrete wall having been put up. The garage of the Bremer business block on Pittsburg street are being taken up and the concrete mixer has been located in front of the proposed building. It will afford a large amount of concrete wall work. The roof on the New Scottsdale House is being pushed ahead as rapidly as possible.

MEETING BEGIN.
 Rev. William A. Tenney started his evangelistic meetings in the United Brethren Church last evening, with a good sized crowd for the first evening. The pastor, Mr. J. E. Runk, offered the opening prayer, and he and Mrs. Tenney sang a duet, filling in for the absence of J. Ray Schwartzendruber who was unable to be present to sing a solo. Rev. Mr. Tenney preached a sermon on personal work. This evening there will be a street meeting at Pittsburg street and Broadway at 7:15 and from there the pastor will go to the church. The regular morning services at the United Brethren Church Sunday morning and in the evening evangelistic ones.

COMMUNION DAY.
 The third quarterly communion will be observed at the Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday morning, Rev. H. B. Eyer, pastor.

STARS CELEBRATING.
 There is no celebration for the Fourth in Scottsdale this year, but the race and fire danger celebration has already commenced, and for about 10 days the ears of the people will be startled by the unexpected explosions of firecrackers, whenever some youngster gets enough money together to buy a firecracker and shoot off, not much matter where. Meanwhile the firemen will live in expectancy of an emergency call most any hour. There are a good many who think that the Fourth of July should be on the day and date named, not stretched over the days and nights for a week or so on each side.

THE BARNHALL GAME.
 The Homestead Real Estate team will be here this afternoon at 3:30 to contest with Scottsdale at Ellsworth Park. This is the team which handed Vandergrift a beating by a score of 7 to 1, which is an item of interest for there has always been a strong and good natured rivalry between Vandergrift and Scottsdale. The Vandergrift fans are talking about another special train over here about July 11.

AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH.
 The morning subject at the Christian Church, Rev. O. J. Howarth, pastor, on Sunday, will be "Christianity and Patriotism." In the evening the sermon subject will be "A Religion Worth While."

BOYS' MEETING.
 There was a tremendously interesting crowd of boys gathered at the Methodist Church last evening to hear their final orders on the outing which they are to have at Ridgeview Park. There will be about 30 in the party, and E. B. Reed will be the official of the camp, which will last for a couple of weeks. The boys leave Tuesday morning, traveling by the West Penn to Latrobe and from there going to Ridgeview.

WALZ MILL.

WALZ MILL, June 27.—Doctor Murray and George Wineman of Youngwood, were business callers here yesterday.

Thomas Martin, Dave Hunter and Huk Henry, local milk shippers, attended State College free demonstrations and returned home this week.

The built up between the single and married men of Walz Mill on Wednesday was a victory for the married men by a score of 3 to 2.

The Walz Mill baseball team is playing at Union today.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Union Church held a meeting yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McCutcheon.

Thomas and William Denmick spent a few days this week with friends at Monongahela City.

John Eisenman of Greensburg was a business caller here on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Wolf of this place, spent Sunday with Mendon friends.

Mrs. George Danner and children of Youngwood, spent Sunday with Mrs. Danner's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bruns.

Miss Blanche Holmes is a student at the local normal school at Altoona.

Increased Bookings of Iron and Steel Products Indicate Turn in the Market But Its Permanency is Matter of Doubt.

Steel Mills Run 40%.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron and Steel Report will review the steel and iron situation tomorrow as follows:

The increased bookings of steel products already reported this month have continued up to date. The actual buying is as heavy this week as last. Taking all finished steel products except rail wire and tin plate, which are 20% down, the actual orders for 20% up. This month are 40% up. The increase in the order book is a period in the past, which is a very good indication of the state of the market. The specifications are fully as heavy as in May, and with some mills they are heavier.

May, it is true, was about the poorest month of the year for steel bookings, and he increase in bookings is not as significant in point of tonnage as it is in point of showing that the market has undoubtedly occurred. The steel turn will prove permanent is the question. At least a few good judges of the steel market think it will prove permanent. It is generally admitted that July will furnish an adequate test, for July is normally very dull, and if there is even moderate good buying in July the outlook for the fall will be excellent.

Among nearly all buyers there is a strong desire to cover third quarter deliveries with regular contracts, but practically at the present low prices for prompt deliveries. The mills are asking advances on such protection, and a moderate amount of the business is being put through on compromise advances, say $1 a ton.

Steel mill operations are again fully up to capacity and are if anything a trifle heavier than 30 days ago.

The Atlantic City conference between the union sheet and tin mills and the Amalgamated Association failed to reach an agreement on the wage scale for the twelve-month beginning July 1st. Twenty-two per cent. of the total sheet mills and 11% of the total tin mills are union.

AMERICAN COAL WINS

Welsh Shippers Alarmed at Threatened United States is Making Abroad.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, June 27.—The success of American coal shippers in securing a large portion of the trade of the Australasian and strengthening their hold on that of French and Spanish ports is occasioning considerable misgivings among the colliery and ship owners of South Wales, who formerly held a monopoly of this trade.

It has just been announced at Cardiff that the Americans have secured an order for 100,000 tons of coal from the Italian State railways for delivery during the next six months, making a total of 300,000 tons for this year. Formerly the whole supply of these railways was secured from Wales. The Peninsular state railways have also bought more extensively from America this year, diverting in this way some $2,500,000 from South Wales. American coal cargoes are also finding their way to French and Spanish ports with increasing frequency.

The high price of Welsh coal and the opening of freight is held responsible for the change. American coal can now be sold at foreign ports at from 50 cents to a dollar a ton cheaper than the Welsh product. The Welsh collieries are working to their full capacity and are fully booked for this year's output, but it is their future which the owners fear, for the Italian and Russian orders could always be depended upon, whereas the orders now being filled are irregular.

DID MRS. ANGLE, PRETTY DIVOCEE, KILL WALDO R. BALLOU? HIS VIOLENT DEATH A SENSATIONAL MYSTERY.

MRS. HELEN M. ANGLE

Special to The Courier.

STAMFORD, Conn., June 27.—Did Mrs. Helen M. Angle, the pretty and well-to-do divorcee, kill Waldo R. Ballou, counselman and one of the most active Republican workers in the state?

Ballou's dead body was found on the sidewalk in front of the building where Mrs. Angle lived in her two room studio. Her story is that she had called upon her in the evening and left about 10 o'clock, being under the influence of liquor. She heard a fall and found him on the second landing in a pool of blood, she says, and thought him to a panic and fearing that if his body were found there it would compromise her good name, she carried the body down stairs and left it on the sidewalk. She then returned to her room and went to bed, where she was found by the police after the body had been discovered on the sidewalk.

Mrs. Angle and Mr. Ballou had been close friends for more than five years. Although he was 29 years older than Mrs. Angle, they often went about together. They were frequently seen in restaurants and riding in his father's automobile together, but with all this there was never a word of scandal in Stamford about either of them. It was remarkable how every one here testified to Mrs. Angle's good reputation. Mrs. Angle's father and Mr. Ballou were good friends. Some persons believed that Mr. Ballou would marry Mrs. Angle, but others said that their friendship was purely platonic.

Mr. Ballou was a widower and Mrs. Angle a widow. She had been divorced six years. Her former husband, Frank Angle, lives in Bridgeport. She obtained the divorce on the ground of desertion. Angle said in Bridgeport that he was convinced that his former wife's reputation was unimpeachable. All of these things helped to soothe the police in their efforts to establish any reason why Mrs. Angle should have killed Mr. Ballou. Those inclined to believe that she knew more than she told, conjectured various reasons: jealousy, sudden anger and other things being ascribed without evidence to support them.

Suffered Everything Until Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Florence, So. Dakota.—"I used to be very sick every month with bearing down pains and backache, and had to take a good deal of the time and very little appetite. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I got a bottle. I felt better the next month so I took three more bottles of it and got well so I could work all the time. I hope every woman who suffers like I did will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. P. W. LANSING, Route No. 1, Florence, South Dakota.

"But didn't you know that he failed to claim the prize of five hundred pounds that he won by his remarkable flight?" he asked. With that he extracted an envelope from his pocket-book, which he handed to me with a flourish. "With the compliments of the committee," he continued.

"And now, if you would enlighten me as to the identity of your delightful husband?"

"But he isn't my husband," I panted, terrified. "My name's Anne Ives, if you want to know, and it's no business of mine who he is, because I never saw him before in my life."

But he absolutely declined to believe me.

"Oh, oh, madame," he said, smiling and shaking his finger at me. "It was a decidedly clever scheme to pretend to be strangers to one another. It made your flight look so much more spontaneous. Of course, I shall not believe you."

"Won't you please take back this money?" I pleaded. "Indeed, you are under a misapprehension."

"Will not madame keep it and hand it to monsieur, if she should happen to encounter him?" asked the secretary, blandly.

Evidently he refused to believe that I was not the wife of the chevalier—the very man whom I had more bitterly than I had ever dreamed I could hate anyone. The very mention of the hateful word indicating the relationship in which he thought we stood filled me with loathing. I should have thrust the money into his face, but suddenly bells rang and there was a commotion for the train. The guard was already signaling to the engine-driver. I dashed into a compartment just in time; the wheels began to revolve, and I sank down into my seat, still clutching the envelope. I looked inside; there were five bank notes of the value of one hundred pounds apiece. I thrust them into my handbag.

Etelle had packed my suitcase for me, and, when I opened it, a little later, what do you suppose I found on top of everything? Nothing else than that horrid little Mr. Spratt's book on the Code Napoleon, which he had so eloquently presented to me at the moment of my departure from Winnipeg. Poor little Mr. Spratt! The sight of it recalled to my mind vividly Mary Jenner, my best friend, and the life which now seemed so infinitely far away. And it was only two weeks before that I had been teaching a class of overgrown boys and girls the principles of arithmetic. If they knew of my subsequent adventures! I smiled, and then I felt the moisture on my eyes. I thrust the envelope containing the money into the cover of Mr. Spratt's book and gave myself up to somewhat painful meditation until I reached Dover.

The night passage was calm and I slept well until awakened at Calais, where we re-embarked for Paris, reaching there at an unearthly hour in the morning. Through the kindness of an old gentleman aboard the train—who knew those old gentlemen who are bubbling over with altruism toward the stranger—I eventually found myself knocking wearily at the doors of the Pension Anglaise. I was assigned a room by the sleepy night clerk and tumbled into bed without even troubling to undress. When I awoke it was past twelve o'clock, and the noise and stir of the great city was in full swing beneath my windows.

I couldn't bring myself to the performance of my mission for a couple of days. I inspected the cathedral, the Louvre, the shops; I reveled in my surroundings. Indeed, the fascination of the French capital so overwhelmed me that I doubt whether I should ever have brought myself to carry out my purpose of visiting the banker but for a serious incident which suddenly recalled me to a sense of duty.

I was in the Louvre for the third or fourth time, reveling in the beauty of the sculpture there. I had paused before a statue of Praxiteles, an exquisite piece of work depicting the ideal of beauty, the Greek Hermes. I fell into a train of speculation. Were the modern Greeks, I thought, of the same physical type? I mused; had I ever seen a Greek? There must be Greeks in Winnipeg, but . . . And suddenly I felt a pair of eyes regarding me from across the gallery. I looked up with a start, to see a man in a stoch hat, attired like a guide, and yet evidently not one, whom he looked the official budge, regarding me with intense preoccupation.

It was the Greek Zeuxis, the hanger-on of villainous scoundrel Leopold Magnif!

But was it? Was not I, rather, the victim of an overwrought imagination? As I stared at him in consternation he moved with stealthy, gliding steps into another chamber. When I had recovered my self-possession and followed him, he was nowhere to be seen.

The shock of this incident recalled me to the duty that lay before me. It indeed I were under espionage, it was my task to obtain my bonds with the least possible delay. I should never feel satisfied until I had disposed of them and taken the train and boat back to England. For the first time I regretted Etelle's absence. My loneliness was appalling; I felt as though some dark, ominous cloud of danger hung over me.

Early the next morning I sought admission to Leopold Magnif, senior, in his banking house upon the avenue. I had anticipated some difficulty in seeing him, but for some reason or other I was admitted almost immediately to the inner room in which he sat alone, surrounded by ledgers and account books. He was evidently toiling as industriously as any of his assistants, for he looked up, nodded the barest greeting, and went on writing.

Five minutes later he put down his pen.

"Now, mademoiselle, I am at your service," he said.

And I told him my story, to which he listened with an impassive face.

I had not thought before of the improbabilities in it. Yet, even as the words left my mouth, I found myself stumbling for explanations and halting like some conspirator concocting a clumsy fabric of falsehoods. Indeed, when I desisted at last, confused and stammering, there was the ghost of a smile upon the old banker's face.

"I congratulate mademoiselle upon her perfect knowledge of French," he answered, and took up his pen again.

"Well, monsieur—" I stammered.

"Pardon me?" he responded, looking up as though I had just stated a new proposition to him.

"You will let me have my bonds?" I asked.

He smiled again; then frowned slightly.

"I am very busy, mademoiselle," he answered. "Why do you not see my friend, Baron Rothschild?"

I felt the color blazing upon my cheek.

"You don't believe me?" I cried, angrily. "You think I am an impostor?"

"My dear mademoiselle!" he protested. "Do you mean seriously to press this ridiculous claim on me—me, Leopold Magnif, with fifty years' experience of men and women?"

"I certainly intend to obtain my property," I answered.

He pressed the tips of his fingers together and looked at me thoughtfully.

"If mademoiselle insists upon my investigating this claim, the consequence may be serious to her," he answered. "Frankly, I have no money for you. It is too late a day to spend your money. Go see the wild geese in the Bois."

I strode forward and stood at his side, quivering with anger.

"Listen to me, monsieur," I cried. "You think me an impostor. Very well, investigate my claim. If I prove fraudulent, hand me over to the police. If I speak the truth, give me my bonds."

"My dear mademoiselle," he protested, "let us assume, then, for the moment, that your story is true. Can you produce anyone who is able to identify you here?"

I shook my head; I was too much enraged to speak. Yet he spoke fairly enough.

"Good. You say that you have come from Canada to claim your bonds. From Canada, observe—a week's journey by a fast steamer. You have no references, no papers. And you have not even the key," he repeated. "And you say the key was stolen from you at the coronation?"

He seemed about to burst into a fit of laughter, repressed himself with difficulty, and suddenly turned to me.

"What is the number of the safe in which your bonds lie?" he asked.

No. 687," I answered promptly.

He rose, took down a book from a shelf, and studied it for a moment, turning the pages swiftly. Then he returned and seated himself beside me again.

"But, mademoiselle, do you not see what difficulties lie before you in attempting to establish your claim?" he demanded. "First, you must prove your identity indisputably. And then —even if you establish this—we must have a duplicate key manufactured. Our strong boxes do not open so readily as you seem to believe."

"Tell me, monsieur," I hazarded, as a new thought crossed my mind, "if one had the key—would it be feasible to enter the vault and take one's property from the safe?"

"Entirely feasible," he answered. "That is, by day. By night none can pass the watchman at the steel gates under any circumstances. But so secure are our locks, so impossible is it to manufacture a key which will fit any of them, that any person having a key and knowing the combination could unlock any box by day—always provided he had the key. By the way, what is your combination?" he asked, keenly.

"It is printed upon the key," I answered. "No. 31025 P. That means MYRO CUBY."

He collapsed in his seat as though he had been shot, and began to eye me furtively—morosely.

"You really are an extraordinary young woman," he said. "Be frank, mademoiselle. You wished to show me that you have knowledge of a part of our cipher. You wish to sell your knowledge."

"For the last time," I screamed, in exasperation, "I am neither a thief nor an impostor. I want my bonds."

He looked at me as though he could hardly believe the evidence of his ears.

"I know what agitates you," I pursued, seeing my advantage. "It was the mention of the word CUBY. It recalls to you the home of the unhappy victims of your revenge."

"Mademoiselle!" he cried, starting up, only to sink backward again.

"Listen, monsieur, and let me explain to you," I said. "During the voyage to England, I made the acquaintance of your son, who was a passenger on the same steamer. Not knowing who I was, he made to me the proposal that I should join him in a scheme to obtain these bonds—from myself! That was how he procured them at a nominal price by deceiving the victim as to their value; then, that by threatening to dispose of them at a moderate rate to the count, or in some manner to place him in possession of them thereby enabling him to pay off the mortgage you hold over him, we should force you to purchase them from us at an enormous rate, or lose your mortgage and, with it, your hold over your enemy. Yes, he told me everything."

"Miserable scoundrel!" cried the old banker, in amazement. "And you told him, mademoiselle—"

"I characterized him precisely as you have done," I answered.

"He was my prey, the apple of my eye," Magnif moaned. "I made him a generous allowance, even after he had disappointed my hopes of some day seeing him succeed to my interests. But he was wayward from birth. He could not run straight. He is a forger, a thief, a trickster. He has been the despair of my life, the curse of my old age. And now he plans to blackmail his own father!"

His outburst was so sincere, so genuine, that my anger evaporated; I could only feel conscious of a wave of vast pity for the old man, so miserable in spite of all his wealth.

"Monsieur," I said, presently, "you doubtless are acquainted with the circumstances that drove my father into exile."

He nodded. "I have been your grandfather's banker for forty years," he answered. "It was unjust; the whim of an ancient aristocrat who placed his own pride before his son's happiness. He drove him from his home, and they differed in politics. Ciel! What a cause! What a cause for dishonoring one's own son! He could never have done so under the law, mademoiselle, but unfortunately some of the old estates are still controlled by the old feudal customs of the Bourbons—notably in your part of France."

"Then you will understand," I pursued, "that I do not harbor any good-will against my grandfather or his grandson."

He looked up at me hopefully, as though he found cause for rejoicing that anyone should share his view.

"You would gladly see these dispossessed—disinherited, as they disinherited your father?" he asked, eagerly.

I nodded. Something within me seemed to rise in protest on behalf of them. I saw the proud old aristocrat in the abbey, I thought of his four and eighty years, destined to end so miserably; then I remembered my father's wrongs and stole my heart.

"Your revenge shall not be long in carrying," cried the old man, bringing down his fist upon the table. "For years I have woven my net around them. I was slow, mademoiselle, but very sure. I have them now. In two weeks—unless they meet the interest on the mortgage—they lose CUBY. And they cannot meet it, the dogs! Twelve thousand francs of interest!—and their castle stripped as bare as a hound's tooth. They live like rats in the ruins of their magnificence. And, even if they meet this interest it will be their last. No, mademoiselle, have no fear. Their day is done."

He started and looked keenly at me. "Mademoiselle," he said impulsively, "either you are indeed the owner or you are the cleverest impostor in Paris. You are ready to make an affidavit?"

"Assuredly," I answered.

"There will be much—what you call 'red tape.' It will be necessary to manufacture a new key. Then an official of the government must be present when you recover your bonds from the interior of the safe. Return three weeks from today, and the safe shall unlock for you."

"Mademoiselle," he continued, "do you know why I am willing to gamble upon your honesty thus? It is not sentiment—it is pure business. It is because in the working out of my plans, the possession of these bonds is essential to me. And so I will risk the loss of what I offer you for them—50,000 francs.

"Ten thousand dollars!" I exclaimed. (I think I mentioned that I specialized in arithmetic.)

"And," he resumed, "you will here and now execute an agreement to sell me the bonds for that amount. Otherwise—why, mademoiselle, I fear that you will never be able to establish your identity."

"But it is a prodigious sum!" I cried, foolishly.

"They are worth that to me," answered the old banker, quietly. "Are you ready to sign, mademoiselle?"

He brought in a couple of secretaries and dictated the draft of the agreement. In consideration of the transfer of the bonds, I was to receive the sum of 48,774 francs, payable three weeks from that day.

"The defect is to cover the unpaid rental of the safety deposit box," he explained, suavely.

I appended my name to the document and walked out of the office like one in a dream. With economy, my money would last easily for three weeks. I should never need to worry about my landlady's bill any more.

My happy thoughts were speedily to be dispelled.

"There is a gentleman waiting to see you, mademoiselle," said the landlady of my pension as I entered. "He has waited two hours in the reception room. Mademoiselle is Canadian—she would doubtless wish to meet him without a chaperon," she whispered.

Somehow my heart failed me as I turned the handle of the door. I was convinced that it was the scoundrel Greek Zeuxis, who had followed me home.

"But it was not—it was Leopold Magnif, the banker's son!"

He bowed low and his countenance assumed a sneering deference as I ignored his outstretched hand and stood facing him in silence. I did not deign to offer the least greeting.

"Miss Ives, you've been to see my father," he volunteered. "It's no use my denying it; my agents have been on your trail since you posed as the wife of the Chevalier d'Yves at the coronation."

"I have no intention of denying anything—to you," I said, contemptuously. "But if you dare insult me with your falsehoods again, you shall be thrown from this hotel."

"At least mademoiselle will acknowledge that she wore a wedding ring during the ceremony!" he pleaded, slyly.

"It was lent to me," I cried, and then bit my lip angrily at the admission.

"Mademoiselle, you are charming," said the scoundrel, regarding me with frank admiration. "Now don't be angry. I have come here as a friend. And to prove it, allow me to restore you this."

He reached into his coat pocket and pulled out the purse which I had lost in so humiliating a manner inside Westminster Abbey. He handed it to me, and, taking it gingerly, I opened it. There, within, lay my hand mirror, my powder puff and my five hundred dollar bills. But the key—the key was gone.

"I gather from your expression," mademoiselle, that you realize that you are in my power," he said.

"If you mean that you have stolen my key—" I began.

"Your key?" he repeated, in feigned astonishment. "I know nothing of any key of yours, mademoiselle, except that this purse was discovered at the entrance to the abbey doors by a servant of mine."

"By your spy, Zeuxis," I interrupted, bitterly. "I thank you for your honesty in restoring my money, at least. Good afternoon, monsieur."

"But, mademoiselle," he cried, in real alarm, "I thought, now that I have convinced you of my power, that you would be willing to join forces with me. Otherwise, you will be ruined. Assuredly you will be ruined. My coup has succeeded beyond my expectations—the one I told you that I had in prospect. And I will marry you tomorrow—tonight, if you insist on it. You will be made for life. And I shall worship you. I am sure that we were made for each other. Ah, mademoiselle, do you suppose that you will have such a chance again? Are you thinking of that boggardly chevalier? Why, he is a pauper, wiped out—besides, he is a libertine, a rake. They say—"

Something in my expression must have alarmed him, for he suddenly ceased speaking, took his hat, and sidled toward the door.

"Remember, mademoiselle," he said, grinning nastily, "I am ready at any time to renew my proposition to you. But unless you accept, you will be ruined—positively ruined, believe me."

The sight of his grinning face horrified me; the memory clung to me for weeks afterward.

When I gained my self-possession I sent a hasty telegram to the banker. It ran as follows:

"Your son and confederate have key to my safe. Seal it and place a guard over it instantly."

This communication elicited no response. But I felt sure that it would effect its purpose—unless the bonds had been already stolen.

I awaited the termination of the three weeks with ill-concealed impatience.

CHAPTER V.

New Friends and Old Enemies.

(In which I learn that my relatives are not black and white.)

Here was I, alone in Paris, under the surveillance, as I was positive, both of Leopold Magnif, Jr., and his rascally sycophant Zeuxis, with three weeks to wait before the opening of the safe in which my precious bonds lay. I was in a quandary. I was in a quandary. I was in a quandary.

"The count and the chevalier! It could not be! And yet, whom else did I know? But, if it were they, how could they have discovered my abode?"

"They sent up no cards!" I asked my hostess.

"No, mademoiselle. But see, only see them and certainly you will not refuse them an interview. 'Var' important business—those were their words."

"Tell them I will be down in a few moments," I answered, and began to arrange my hair for the interview. In the midst of brushing it I halted angrily. My heart was pounding in my throat in the most disconcerting way. Why, I asked myself, eternally, why did I go to this trouble about my personal appearance for the sake of such mortal enemies? And why was I so agitated? I could not solve the problem, and twisting up my hair hastily, I descended the stairs, trying to regain control over my nerves.

It was as I had surmised. The count and the chevalier were waiting for me in the reception room, both ruthlessly attired in morning clothes. They rose, each with a low bow, upon my entrance. Both looked extremely grave, and neither evinced the slightest sign of having previously seen me. I motioned each to a chair, but they remained standing.

and in three weeks my enemies could work incredibly harm. Magnif had threatened me with ruin unless I accepted his advances. But how could he fulfil his threat? Only in one way, clearly; by utilizing the key which he had stolen from my purse to open my safe and to abstract the bonds. Would he dare? Had the safe already been rifled? But even so I should at least be no worse off than when I had arrived in Paris. As the days wore away, and the memory of the man grew fainter I came to despise and disregard his powers for mischief.

It did seem unnecessary that I should have to wait three weeks while Magnif, Sr., was fashioning a new key for my safe. But I inferred that he was in reality utilizing this period to make inquiries in Canada concerning me; consequently I became more tranquil in mind. I sent my friend Etelle Christie the ten pounds which she had lent me and settled down to live frugally at the Pension Anglaise with my remaining $460. At the worst I should have enough with which to return to Winnipeg.

A little more than a week of my probationary period had elapsed, when one morning our landlady summoned that two gentlemen were awaiting me in the reception room. Instantly I thought of Magnif and the Greek.

"Tell them that I will not see them," I answered.

The landlady appeared shocked. "But, Miss Ives, they are of the quality, assuredly," she protested. "An old gentleman and a young one. And the latter—what build, what figure! I thought to have the pleasure to congratulate mademoiselle," she continued teasingly.

"The count and the chevalier! It could not be! And yet, whom else did I know? But, if it were they, how could they have discovered my abode?"

"They sent up no cards!" I asked my hostess.

"No, mademoiselle. But see, only see them and certainly you will not refuse them an interview. 'Var' important business—those were their words."

It took more good tailor work and better materials to make the new summer suits in our Men's Clothing Store than it took to make any suits similarly priced. We paid extra for real finger-and-thumb work and real woollens, but you don't have to.

The stocks today are fine and fresh. They are varied to make it improbable that a man won't find the suit he likes.

These are summer suits in everything that makes for coolness, comfort, correct style; in a word, a fine appearance.

PAVEMENT COMPLETED.

New Sidewalk Along Welthe Property Conforms to Council's Grade.

The new concrete pavement in front of the Welthe building and Wynn Hotel on Pittsburgh street was completed yesterday but only a section of it was opened to travel. The balance was put in service today.

The grade of the pavement has been outlined some comment, but it was adopted by a committee of council who figured that if it is quite a drop from the curb to the street in some sections, pedestrians have no need nor right to cross a street at any but crossings. The pavement is a distinct improvement.
